Winter weather wrecks havoc

Arctic blast closes schools, causes numerous accidents

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The Big Sandy region this week experienced temperatures unlike any it's seen in the last 20 years, with an arctic cold front moving into the area that caused numerous accidents and school closings.

Shelters were also set up all across the region to give people a place to go should they need to get warm.

Kentucky Highway Department in District 12 put down a layer of liquid calcium chloride Monday before going home for the day in the hope that it would do some good before the temperatures dropped overnight, since temperatures were already below the point where solid rock salt is effective.

Liquid calcium chloride stops working at 12-15 degrees, according to information provided by the state highway department.

District 12 also kept its district office operations center and all maintenance garages open Monday night to be available to assist law enforcement and first responders if necessary.

A District 12 press release said it would be able to respond quickly to isolated incidents in case of downed trees or utility lines, rock slides and other such problems.

Engineering branch manager Darold Slone urged people to stay home Tuesday, saying there was barely enough snow left to plow. Once highway crews finished that, they have no choice but to wait for the weather to warm, at which time the chemicals they've applied would start to break up the ice, he said.

"This weather event is not typical, so we don't really know how long it might take for the chemicals to work," Slone said. "The air temperature is not the same as the ground temperature. It could mean that roads are not cleared to our usual standards until Thursday or even Friday, again, depending on how the temperatures hold and how the wind chill factor affects the situation."

Former Lawrence County Emergency Management director Harold Slone issued a press release in anticipation of the forecast predicting temperatures dropping lower than they have in 20 years, with wind chill temperatures negative in the double digits.

In anticipation of an increase in the demand for electricity, PJM Interconnection, the electricity grid operator for more than 61 million people in 13 states and the District of Columbia, and Kentucky Power asked customers to conserve electricity during the frigid PIKEVILLE — Arraignment is set this week for the former mayor of Martin and five other people charged with federal offenses stemming from the 2012 general election.

Arraignment is scheduled Thursday in U.S. District Court in Pikeville for former Martin Mayor Ruth Thomasine Robinson; her husband, James "Red" Robinson; his son, James Steven Robinson; city employees Ginger Michelle Halbert and Henry A. Mullins; and Johnny T. Moore.

An indictment returned Dec. 19 charges the defendants with civil rights conspiracy and payment or offer of payment for voting in the November 2012 election in which Thomasine Robinson lost re-election by three votes.

As the mayor for approximately 12 years, she "acquired substantial apparent and actual authority and power that allowed her to influence the quality of life of residents of the city," the indictment says.

"These included influence over the assignment of individuals to public housing, the hiring and firing of city employees, and the conduct of city police officers in their interaction with the residents of the city," the indictment says.

FRANKFORT — Two state legislators from the Big Sandy region prefiled several bills for the 2014 session of the General Assembly, which began Tuesday.

State Rep. Hubert Collins of Wittensville prefiled three bills while state Sen. Ray Jones of Pikeville prefiled two pieces of legislation.

A bill prefiled by Collins in June would move the per se DUI threshold from 0.08 to 0.05.

A bill prefiled by Collins in December would amend a current law to clarify that any vehicle forfeited to law enforcement agencies that is contaminated with methamphetamine would not be used, resold or salvaged for parts but would instead be destroyed or salvaged for scrap metal.

Another bill prefiled by Collins in December relates to the valuation of motor vehicles for property tax purposes.

The legislation would amend a current law to clarify "the standards for appraising the fair cash value of motor vehicles that are 20 years old or older, for property tax purposes, by providing that no vehicle of said age shall be presumed to have been maintained or restored to either the original

Funding announced for substance abuse treatment

FRANKFORT — Attorney General Jack Conway announced Monday that more than $32 million recovered in settlements with two pharmaceutical companies will be used throughout Kentucky to expand substance abuse treatment, including opiate addictions.

Conway made the announcement at a press conference with Gov. Steve Beshear, First Lady Jane Beshear and House Speaker Greg Stumbo of Prestonsburg.

"We've done a tremendous job in Kentucky working together to tackle the problem of prescription drug abuse from a law enforcement perspective," Conway said. "At the end of the day, we must increase access to treatment if we're going to stop the cycle of addiction. These settlement funds will expand treatment for youth and adults throughout the Commonwealth."

According to data from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, Kentucky currently only has one-tenth of the treatment beds it needs. The settlement funds will help create a new treatment center for adults, treatment scholarships, a grant program for new juvenile treatment beds and/or centers, and expanded services for juveniles.

"Attacking prescription drug abuse demands a holistic strategy that includes robust treatment efforts. This expansion of treatment availability will make an incredible impact on individuals, families and communities suffering from the impact of substance abuse and addiction," said Gov. Beshear. "For thousands of Kentuckians, this expansion will offer an opportunity to restore their health and return to productive lives."

The settlement will provide $500,000 to complete the construction of a Recovery Kentucky Center in Ashland. Recovery Kentucky utilizes a peer-based model where addicts in different stages of recovery work together to get and stay sober. The Ashland facility will be the 17th center in the state and will provide easier access to treatment for families in that region.

The plan also provides $2.52 million in scholarships for individuals who seek treatment at Recovery Kentucky Centers, but who are not subject to the corrections system.

Thirty scholarships will be awarded each year for two years for each of the 14 currently operational Recovery Kentucky Centers, making a total of 840 scholarships available over a two-year period.

Over the next two years, $560,000 will be used to help create 14 drug-free homes for people completing and transitioning out of residential substance abuse treatment programs. The money will provide for start-up costs and rental assis-

MARTIN: Ex-mayor, others to be arraigned

The indictment says that “a number of the qualified voters in Martin were disabled and were poor residents of public housing in Martin, or resided in houses owned” by Thomasine Robinson, while others were unemployed or employed by the city.

“These qualified voters could be easily manipulated and influenced by the mayor and others regarding the exercise of their right to vote, by inducements or implied threats regarding their housing status, by fear of losing their job with the city, or by the fear of her ability to affect the quality of their life by using her powers as mayor of the city,” the indictment says.

In the 2012 general election, some voters were “intimidated and coerced” by Thomasine Robinson and “others working in her campaign so that they refrained from voting or were deprived of the freedom of choice of candidates for whom to vote,” the indictment says.

From October to mid-November 2012, the indictment alleges, the defendants “did knowingly and willfully conspire and agree with each other and others, known and unknown, to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate qualified voters of Martin, under color of law, in the free exercise and enjoyment of certain rights secured to them by the Constitution and laws of the United States, that is, the right of all qualified voters under the Equal Protection and Due Process Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to vote, to have their votes reflect their personal choice of candidates, and the right to have their votes be duly counted and have full effect, and not be diluted, or diminished by votes that are procured through coercion and intimidation.”

The indictment alleges that the defendants “would approach residents of public housing, and tenants of homes owned” by Thomasine Robinson and “request that they obtain an absentee ballot for the general election.”

“In many stances these residents were poor, physically, mentally or developmentally disabled, and felt intimidated and coerced into complying with the instructions of the defendants with respect to voting,” the indictment says. “The defendants would present to the residents and tenants, a letter, already prepared, requesting an absentee ballot be sent to them by the County Clerk, and would ask them to sign the letter. The defendants would instruct the residents and tenants to call the defendants upon receipt of the absentee ballots. Upon receipt of the ballots, the defendants would fill out the absentee ballots for the residents, or would instruct the residents to fill out the ballots as directed, voting for the candidates chosen by the defendants and not by the resident. It was part of the conspiracy that one of more of the defendants would give on the application for absentee ballot a false justification for voting by absentee ballot, such as the voter was too infirm to come to the polls. It was part of the conspiracy that one or more of the defendants held out to residents that they could receive a better apartment if they voted as requested by the defendants. It was part of the conspiracy that one or more of the defendants expressly or impliedly threatened to evict residents and tenants if they did not vote, or if they did not vote as directed. It was part of the conspiracy that one or more of the defendants caused residents and tenants to be evicted because they believed they had not voted, or had voted incorrectly. It was part of the conspiracy that Ruth Thomasine Robinson directed Martin police officers to serve eviction notices on tenants. It was part of the conspiracy that one at least one occasion two of the defendants harassed a qualified voter about voting to the point that the voter would not come out of his apartment to vote because he was in fear of physical harm.”

Some of the defendants also paid or offered to pay residents for voting, the indictment says.

Thomasine Robinson, Halbert and two other people pleaded not guilty to a nine-count indictment issued in October accusing them of engaging in a scheme to defraud the Social Security Administration and misapplying federal funds.

Trial in that case is set for later this month, but Robinson's attorney has asked for a continuance.

factory condition or any otherwise classic condition unless information is available that warrants that finding.

The bill would also establish the “standard value of said vehicles as being either the actual valuation of a vehicle in its nineteenth year for vehicles assessed for taxation in the Commonwealth in that year, or the clean trade-in value prescribed by the applicable edition of the valuation manual prescribed by the Department of Revenue for a vehicle in its nineteenth year if the vehicle was not assessed in the Commonwealth in that year, reduced by ten percent annually for each year beyond 19 years, unless information is available that warrants any deviation from that standard value.”

tion from that standard value.”

Jones prefiled a bill in October that would require that Kentucky Commercial Vehicle Enforcement officers are paid equally to Kentucky State Police officers with the equivalent rank, grade and position.

Jones prefiled another bill in October that would increase the membership of the state Public Service Commission from three to seven commissioners, with all commissioners being elected rather than appointed.

Collins, a Democrat, represents the 97th House District, which now includes Johnson, Morgan and Wolfe counties. Jones, also a Democrat, represents the 31st Senate District, which now includes Lawrence, Martin and Pike counties.

SHERIFF: Blackburn forced to lay off employees

get as I always do, but they wouldn't approve it and decided to do their own," Blackburn said Thursday. "They cut payroll from $600,000 to $300,000, and they expect me to also pay rent for my office ($1,000 per month), all the utilities, the employee's health insurance, liability insurance, retirement. I am in my office today trying to figure out what other expenses I am going to have to cut. There is no way I have that kind of money when I have to borrow money just to make payroll."

Blackburn said he so far laid off three dispatchers, three road deputies and one testing center person.

"I used to have dispatchers 24/7 but now there will be no night shift, and I used to have an office in McDowell, but I have also had to close that. I had nine road deputies with one of them being off on workers comp for a shoulder injury, and now I'm down to five, with the officer still out on worker's comp," Blackburn said.

id weather across the region, especially between the hours of 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The electricity provider recommends setting thermostats to lower than usual to the lowest comfortable level, if health permits, and to postpone using major electric appliances such as stoves, dishwashers and clothes dryers until mid-day or after 9 p.m., when the demand for electricity decreases.

They also recommended turning off lights, appliances and equipment that is not needed or in use in order to conserve electricity and to help ensure adequate power supplies.

PJM Interconnection said in the release that it was monitoring the power supply conditions and would do everything possible to keep power flowing in the region. If necessary, it said it would take additional steps to ensure the integrity of the electrical system.

Kentucky Power has energy-savings tips and ideas on

"I was forced to lay these people off because of the decision of the fiscal court to cut the law enforcement budget. This has really put a dent in my department. The clerk's office has agreed to pay their expenses for six months."

At a Dec. 20 meeting of the fiscal court, it was learned that the court has had a shortage of coal severance tax revenue between $1.6 and $1.8 million.

A woman representing the Floyd County Sheriff's Office inquired during the meeting why the county expected officers to be laid off and punished for their mistakes in budgeting when the sheriff's office has managed to stay within their budget.

Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall said there were expenses and has been no increase in revenue.

At the time of the special meeting, he fiscal court members also said they understood it would mean cuts to the sheriff's office and that they had no plans to lay off anybody within the county government, nor to cut or reduce services.

its Web site at kentuckypower.com. It also reminds customers that conserving electricity at any time is a wise move that can save money and help protect the environment.

The Public Service Commission also issued a release and offered tips for reduced energy consumption.

"As temperatures plummet, energy usage and home heating bills inevitably rise," PSC Chairman David Armstrong said. "But a few simple steps can help limit the effect."

Armstrong advised consumers to manage their energy costs by taking steps such as turning down their thermostat a few degrees, sealing leaks around windows and door openings and to cover windows with plastic sheeting.

Armstrong also said that programs are available to help consumers struggling to pay their heating bill through local community action agencies and utility companies but that funds are limited and sometimes run out during the heating season.

Magistrate Hattie Owens said in a television interview with WSAZ that "Judge Marshall always told us, if there's no invoices back there, we don't owe it. Well, now the contractors are wanting their money and they're saying it's about $850,000."

Owens also said that Marshall hired a lot of contractors to do a lot of work and that the magistrates weren't aware of it.

The court is also planning to sell surplus property, to start charging for golf tournaments, to park all county vehicles, shut off cell phone service, to limit autopsies to only those ordered by the coroner, to start charging rent for offices being sued at the Allen Golf Course Pro Shop and have no overtime for county employees unless there is an emergency.

"If they don't take these steps, this court will be removed and the state will take over," County Attorney Keith Bartley said. "If the state takes over, I promise you, we've seen it happen in other places, everything will be cut."

Bartley also said the judge and magistrates would not lay off any county employees or cut off any county services, but that they could do so in the future.

LIHEAP crisis phase begins Monday

Big Sandy Area Community Action Program (BSACAP) will begin taking applications for the Crisis component of the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) beginning Monday, Jan. 13. Applications will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis until March 31 or until funds are exhausted. The crisis component of LIHEAP provides assistance to low-income households experiencing heating emergencies. Households are considered to be in a home heating crisis if:

- The household is within four days of running out of fuel if bulk fuel (coal, fuel oil, propane, kerosene, or wood) is the primary heating source; or the household has received a disconnect notice if natural gas or electric is the heating source.
- The household's home heating costs are included in the rent and the household has received an eviction notice for non-payment of rent.
- To be eligible for crisis assistance, households must verify their address, verify a heating crisis exists and meet federal income eligibility guidelines. Applicants also must apply in their county of residence. In addition, applicants must present the following: proof of household income for prior month; birthdates for all household members; and Social Security card or official documentation with social security numbers for each member of household. Applications will be taken at the following BSACAP service offices from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.: Floyd County, 60 Court Street, Allen, 606-874-3595; Johnson County, 230 Court Street, Paintsville, 606-789-6515; Magoffin County, 131 S. Church Street, Salyersville, 606-349-2217; Martin County, 387 E. Main Street, Inez, 606-298-3217; and Pike County, 478 Town Mountain Road, Pikeville, 606-432-2775. LIHEAP, a national energy assistance initiative funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is funded in Kentucky by the state Cabinet for Health and Family Services and Community Action Kentucky.

tance. Residents are required to work and remain drug free. "This money will go a long way in helping Kentucky's ongoing efforts to provide treatment options for drug abuse. I am especially pleased that a sizeable portion will be used to help juveniles and to provide needed funding for the KASPER program," said House Speaker Greg Stumbo.

Almost $19 million will be used to start a grant program that will fund comprehensive juvenile substance abuse treatment programs, both expanding treatment beds at existing facilities and creating new juvenile treatment programs with the full continuum of care, including intensive outpatient and follow-up care centers.

The governor Monday created by executive order the Substance Abuse Treatment Advisory Committee to oversee the settlement funding, including the juvenile substance abuse treatment grant program. The committee will be chaired by Conway and also includes Jane Beshear, Cabinet for Health and Family Services Secretary Audrey Tayse Haynes, Justice and Public Safety Secretary J. Michael Brown, Kentucky Office of Drug Control Policy Director Van Ingram, Kentucky Housing Corporation Executive Director/CEO J. Kathryn Peters and Dr. Allen Brenzel, clinical director of the Department for Behavioral Health, Developmental and Intellectual Disabilities. Appointments made by Stumbo and Senate President Robert Stivers will serve as ex-officio members of the committee.

The following entities will also receive funds over the next two years from the settlement:

- $6 million to administer and upgrade KASPER, Kentucky's electronic prescription drug monitoring program.
- $1 million to support substance abuse treatment for pregnant women by Chrysalis House in Lexington and Independence House in Corbin.
- $1.5 million to the University of Kentucky to develop best practices for juvenile substance abuse treatment providers.

- $1 million to develop a school-based substance abuse screening tool with the Kentucky Department of Education to intervene with at-risk children before they enter judicial or social services systems.
- $250,000 to create a database to evaluate outcomes of juvenile treatment.

10 great apps for your new tablet

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

If you're new to the world of tablets, it's not surprising that you might not know where to start. You'll hear a lot of talk about "apps." Apps are applications. Think of them as software programs customized for your tablet.

They are available through an already installed app you'll find on your tablet. It's the "App Store" on iPads or the "Google Play" on Android tablets. Microsoft calls theirs the "Windows Store."

As time goes on, you'll find the apps that get the tablet to do what you want it to do. Right now, here are 10 to get you started. I've tried to balance three considerations - usefulness, the wow factor, and unlocking your tablet's possibilities.

Google Earth

There is no app with a greater Gee Whiz factor! Google Earth is a massive collection of satellite photos, seamlessly stitched together. The result? You have the ability to zoom all over our Earth, swooping in to see everything from your childhood home to the Taj Mahal.

Google Sky View

If the earth isn't enough for you, download Sky View, which gives you a dizzying view of the heavens—stars, planets, and constellations, all nicely labeled. Poke around and you can even find the International Space Station, 200 miles up!

Flipboard

One thing you'll quickly discover is that there's a lot of stuff out there to read! What you really need, though, is a way to easily read the news you choose. This is a delightful and easy-to-use app that brings together the news sources you select as well as Facebook posts, Instagram photos, YouTube videos and anything else you'd like, all in a fun and responsive magazine format.

Kindle

For regular book reading, there's no cleaner reader than the Kindle app. It's available on every platform you can think of, including smartphones. And the Kindle reader keeps your place for you, too, no matter what you're reading it on.

Netflix or Hulu

Those beautiful screens are there for a reason. Netflix and Hulu give you great movies and TV shows to watch on them. Netflix requires a streaming subscription; the movie selection is so-so, but the TV back catalog is pretty extensive. Hulu has some free stuff for casual users; its subscription service unlocks a lot of good films and a big array of TV shows too, including recent episodes of Saturday Night Live, the Daily Show, and Law & Order.

Evernote

Evernote takes your notes and puts them in the cloud, so they're accessible from any other device you care to sync to it. Text, photos, and even audio, Evernote can handle it. If you are trying to get organized, this will help you make it happen.

Skype

You might have heard about "Skyping," but might not understand exactly what that means. Skype is a quick and easy way to have video chats with friends and family all over the world. Best of all, your calls are free. Download the app and sign up for an account. Then start hunting for friends!

Highlands Speech will work with Rite Care

PRESTONSBURG — Highlands Speech & Language Therapy will soon be working with Rite Care to provide a speech and language service expansion to the Eastern Kentucky region.

Highlands Speech & Language Therapy evaluates and treats a variety of speech language disorders, including articulation, phonological processing disorders, receptive and expressive language disorders, fluency, oral motor, and feeding disorders. Other than federally-funded programs available within school systems, the opening of Highlands Speech & Language Therapy in January 2013 established it as the only provider of speech therapy in the area.

Rite Care is a national philanthropic organization that has dedicated itself to speech and language therapy for children in need. The Covington Scottish Rite Foundation is partnering with Highlands Speech & Language Therapy to bring Rite Care to the children in the region. Rite Care is intended for children in the 2-5-year-old age range to prepare them for school. Qualifying families will be those that are not eligible for state/federal assistance, yet have no insurance or have unaffordable co-pays.

Covington Scottish Rite Foundation has a service center in Cold Spring, with Speech and Language Services, and opened its first expanded service in Ashland in 2012. Beginning Jan. 1, the third service was established at Highlands Speech & Language Therapy in Prestonsburg through the Highlands Regional Medical Center.

"We are excited about the opportunity to work with Rite Care," said Amber

Fleming, director of speech therapy. "Our goal is to find resources for providing services to those in need."

A great way to start the day.

Willams art exhibited at Mountain Arts Ctr.

PRESTONSBURG – An eclectic collection of forgotten items brought to life dash the walls of the Mountain Arts Center as it hosts the art exhibit of Floyd County native Donna Williams.

Her exhibit, "Parsing the Lunacy," will be on display at the MAC through Feb. 27.

Williams is part of a new generation of Eastern Kentucky artists creating buzz throughout the coal fields. Williams says her work, which relies on "found objects," gives voice to the ideas in her mind.

"Most times it is easier for me to say through art, what I am hesitant to say out loud," she said. "There is something very liberating about sticking crow feet on a doll's body and maybe anchoring her in a box to represent what I feel emotionally. There is freedom in embracing your oddities."

Williams' art literally consists of random objects, from doll heads to old jewelry and rusty nails - anything that draws her interest makes its way into the creative process.

Since 2011, her work has been featured at the AAC, the Underground Gallery in Whitesburg, Appalshop, the Perry County Public Library, as well as All Good Things and Lizzie B's in Prestonsburg.

In 2013, Williams was invited to exhibit her work in Oslo, Norway as part of an international exhibit.

She is a founder of the regional art group Kentucky Art Tribe based in Prestonsburg and a member of Epi-Centre Arts based in Whitesburg.

Williams is a juried member of the Appalachian Artisan Center, where her studio is currently located.

Along with Lacy Hale of Whitesburg, Williams co-hosts a radio show, "Art Matters", which can be heard the third Wednesday of every month on WMMT 88.7 at 6 p.m.

A reception and opportunity to meet Williams will be held Feb. 6 from 6-8 p.m.

More of Williams' work can be seen online at www.facebook.com/donna.williams.art or www.donnawilliamsart.blogspot.com.

Photoshop Express

Tablets are a great place to edit pictures. All you need is a good app to work with. Adobe's Photoshop Express does the job. It's a (very) lite but extremely useful version of its famous high-end product, Photoshop. You'll find it gives you the tools you need to lighten backgrounds, adjust colors and crop photos.

Sketchbook Express

Tablets can showcase the artist inside all of us. Right now, it seems many of the most acclaimed drawing and painting apps work on Apple products with one exception. Sketchbook Express, available for both Apple and Android tablets, has a dense palette of brushes, colors and textures to work with, all from the moves of your fingers on the tablet's purchase. It's great for artists of all ages.

Battery Saver

One of the biggest drains

on the battery is your tablet's bright high-definition screen. Keeping the screen slightly dimmed can add hours of battery life. You'll also want to turn off your gadget's wireless communications when you don't need them. That includes cellular, Wi-Fi, GPS and Bluetooth signals, which are constantly roaming and eating into battery life. Use a free app like Battery Saver, to sniff out power-hogging apps and programs.
